HINO TRUCKS TO OFFER EXTENDED CAB OPTION

Medium-duty truck operators who need a little more room — or even a place to sleep overnight, just got good news from Hino Trucks. The Toyota Group Company announced that all Hino models now will have an optional extended cab version, available in the spring of 2008.

The 30” extension will have side windows with operating vents, and a fully trimmed Hino interior. The outside is constructed using corrosion resistant composite materials.

“We can now offer the same Hino advantages our customers have grown to expect to owner-operators and fleets who require the additional cab room,” said Glenn Ellis, National Manager, Marketing and Dealer Development. “The 30” cab extension has the same cab height as our standard cab, making for a comfortable, roomy interior for drivers and passengers alike.”

The base model has no seating, with an optional full-width bench seat in black vinyl, or a 26” day bunk with foam mattress and under-bunk storage.

Hino Motors Sales U.S.A. is a Toyota Group company, with operations headquartered in Bloomfield Hills, Mich. The Hino Truck nameplate is the fastest-growing medium duty truck brand in the United States.
